

Easton, PA Map & Guide

EASTON NEIGHBORHOODS

1 College Hill

This historic neighborhood, overlooking downtown Easton, is home to Lafayette College, and Gollub and Nevin Parks. It features a mix of architectural styles and includes grand mansions, with most homes built between 1830 and 1940.

3 South Side

Designed by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company in 1833, the borough of South Easton was designed with canal and railroad workers in mind. With affordable housing for middle income families, its close proximity to I-78 makes it a convenient gateway to Easton.

2 Downtown

Our walkable downtown is the place to be. Easton boasts 30+ eateries, America's oldest open-air farmers' market and festivals year-round. Soak up history in our riverfront city, enjoy Broadway-style shows at The State Theatre, and explore our many attractions.

4 West Ward

A convenient, walkable community made up of many smaller neighborhoods, the West Ward features historic architecture and a funky, creative atmosphere. Stroll to micro-brew pubs, award-winning community gardens, the beautiful Easton Cemetery, and the Karl Stirner Arts Trail.

- 1 Centre Square
Centre Square is actually a circle—and it's the heart of our city, historically and today. Its 75-foot monument pays tribute to all who served in the military. During the holidays, it's transformed into the world's tallest Peace Candle.
- 2 Easton Public Library | 515 Church Street
Originally the Easton Library Company, it was established in 1811 with 700 titles. By 1895, the Easton Public Library was formed and a new building rose with funds donated by Andrew Carnegie in 1902.
- 3 The Jacob Nicholas House | 5th & Ferry Street
One of the few remaining Easton buildings from the Federal Period, the house is named for Jacob Nicholas, a wood turner and later, the owner and captain of a Durham boat.
- 4 The Parsons-Taylor House | 4th & Ferry Street
Built in 1757 for surveyor general William Parsons, this house is one of the oldest buildings in the city and an outstanding example of colonial architecture. George Taylor, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, took up residence here in 1780.
- 5 St. John's Church | 330 Ferry Street
Founded in 1740 by German Lutherans, services were originally held in a log school house. A grave cellar lies beneath the church, the burial site of many important Eastonians. Visitors can view the cellar during July's Easton Heritage Day.
- 6 Karl Stirner Arts Building | 230 Ferry Street
Often credited with revitalizing the city's arts scene, international sculptor Karl Stirner (1923-2016) moved to Easton in 1983 and purchased this building. Today Easton boasts numerous galleries and dozens of nationally recognized artists call it home.
- 7 Phoenix Volunteer Fire Company | 219 Ferry Street
A volunteer fire company was housed here beginning in 1858. By 1989, now owned by the U.S. Post Office and in complete disrepair, an agreement was reached with the city to preserve the historic Phoenix building.
- 8 Bachmann Publick House | 169 Northampton Street
Built in 1753 by Jacob and Katrina Bachmann, the house has served as a tavern, courtroom, grocer, and residence for George Taylor. Famous visitors include John Adams and Ben Franklin. Today, it houses the Lenape Cultural Center.
- 9 The Governor Wolf Building | 42 N. 2nd Street
Built in 1893, this stunning building served as Easton's first high school and is named after the seventh Governor of Pennsylvania, George Wolf of Easton, who founded the Pennsylvania Free Public School System. The stone entry is called the Penny Arch because its construction was made possible by schoolchildren's penny donations.
- 10 Florence Seibert House | 73 N. 2nd Street
An inductee into the National Women's Hall of Fame, Florence Seibert was handicapped by polio at age three, graduated valedictorian at Easton High School, and became a distinguished biochemist, studying intravenous therapy and diseases. In 1934, she developed a TB test which was eventually adopted worldwide.
- 11 Millionaire's Row | N. 3rd Street
During the Industrial Revolution, Easton was the wealthiest town in the region and this section of Third Street was known as Millionaire's Row from the mid 1800s through the early 20th century.
- 12 First United Church of Christ | 229 Church Street
The church and the courthouse played a prominent role in the American Revolution, serving as hospitals for wounded and infirm soldiers. George Washington is said to have visited soldiers in here during a visit to Easton.
